

This material fills in a shortage of information from the time I was about to graduate from Western State College up until the late fall of 2008 for my book Qumazon trail 2009..

I was returning from the computer lab, and I was real mad. The kid that had been assigned to my project for databases and file management class had done nothing on the project since mid February when I had started on it. It was now may twenty something and there were one or two weeks left of the semester. In the morning I had seen him at the lab and approached him about it. I was ready to ask him to go outside, but he pretended I was not even there. The teacher had ignored the problem despite my repeated complaints which I avoided at all costs also. At lunch I had returned home and put one single chicken wing in the oven for dinner. That's where my thinking failed; one chicken wing is not a dinner.

There they were, it was the cops. They were standing in my doorway with my pot plants. They had a funny look on their face because the plants were drooping to the ground and all the leaves were falling off. I had not harvested because I had been too busy to do so. I stopped frozen in place. I could not flee, not with nothing but a backpack full of schoolbooks. Actually there was a joint in the bottom of the pack that was reserved for in case a day came when I need to walk up the hill after class to cool off. At the start of every class I had dropped my pack on the ground and thought of how that joint was being abused and flattened. They would find that too because they confiscated the pack. Yes, I approached thinking that there was no way that they could have a valid search warrant. I was cuffed up, and hauled two blokes to the station. Put in a holding cell I could not even sit down. All I did was pace in circles for what seemed like days. I made my call and got a bondsman with my credit card. I will never forget the cop sifting through his manual and declaring my bond to be only five thousand dollars. It was less than one tenth of what I expected, and I had expected to spend the rest of my living days in jail because I had heard that the penalty was a year for each plant. There were approximately fifty plants. Most were real scrawny and at least one or two dozen were only days old. One needs to start plants weekly to keep the supply up. My lights were of the simple kind, which was florescent to avoid detection from the electric bill. That would also help explain the high plant count.

When they let me out, at midnight, I was declared to be sober, like I always went to the computer lab high. I ran the entire block home and went to bed. That night I slept probably ten minutes. I did dream about my own mind. It was an extremely long coiled up snake creature except it was much more ugly than any snake alive. It did not seem to be one until it had uncoiled itself. This beast had been happily feasting; on my pot consumption for many years and it was more than agitated at this disturbance.

I picked a lawyer out of the phone book listed for criminal defense. When I met with him he secured a fee another five grand. That topped out two of my credit cards, but the bond would come back because I was not going to flee. I was going to beat this thing, I thought. I somehow managed to finish my finals at school the following week except I refused to enter the class room to present my project because my project partner was in there, and he had fabricated something that week end. I had been arrested on Friday night, and I had successfully missed no classes. Only the students seemed to know but they said absolutely nothing to me about it. It begins to tell you about the kind of town I was in, extremely conservative. Except for the students who had a reputation in the opposite direction for Western State College is known as a party school. I passed my finals, and wrote my proposal to do my senior project during the summer while I awaited trial. The judge had supposedly made a gentleman's agreement through my father and the lawyer to let me finish school before the trial. Actually they did have a problem. You see I had been so mad that the chicken wing had been left to cook on broil. The house had filled up with smoke and the neighbor had called the fire department. In order to secure the premises, they had pulled the pins on the locked closet door that contained my grow. I was furious because there were two fire alarms had gone off. That would be one mine and the apartment managers. To me, the consequences of a wrong decision along these lines was not, well, entertain-able. I had kept a golden silk robe hanging over that closet door so as to further avoid detection. How could anyone have been in there if there were a robe over that door. Still they claimed that despite the fact that they had searched and then gotten a warrant the warrant was valid. This was Gunnison County where the law is well known for this kind of logic and maneuver.

As it turned out my lawyer was like my worst enemy. He was a former District Attorney from California, and looked me straight in the face and declared that I was guilty and belonged in jail. He said that there was no way that the search warrant could be renounced because the judge that had signed the search warrant was sure to be the one to perform my trial. The assistant district attorney lived in that very building just up stairs and he was to be my best friend. The judge was kept out of reach of me because the district attorney would do a plea bargain to keep me out of jail. My felony was to be reduced to a first class misdemeanor of over one once for one reason and the plea would reduce it to a petty misdemeanor if I could successfully make it through a probation period. It was also reduced from three to two year. The lawyer's associate had told me that the petty misdemeanor of possession of paraphernalia could be cleaned from my record because quote "pot should not be illegal." You see in Gunnison county there are so many drug violations that going to jail for drugs was simply not possible unless one had been violent or one denied all charges. I knew better than that. Indecently the lawyer's associate would disavow his claim years latter to be able to get the final paraphernalia record absolved. He was apparently sure that I could not make it through probation. One had to stop doing the drugs immediately, or one would get a strike upon random drug testing. Three strikes and the felony charges would be brought to court again. I smoked for two days after that and quite because my lawyer had told me he wanted a urine test to represent me after just one month. This test passed so he did represent me.

Anyway, the land lord had been kind in letting me stay two full months before I was to be kicked out or receive formal eviction. I found an ad in the paper that described three girls needing a roommate. I called and somehow talked my way in. To my astonishment they wee all potheads. I had worried to much, and I told them of my pending trail upon move in and they did not care. These damn girls kept their pot pipes lying on the table in plain sight all of the time. One could even see them from the window at the front door. This drove me crazy because it disobeyed my bond and I risked the return of the felony. Anyway after just one month I was out of there. Expecting to go to jail I took all of my belongings and put them in storage; and I moved in with my father in the next town over, Crested Butte. I did finish my degree work to get my bachelors degree in computer science during that first month. Then about five days latter the trail did happen. That was after my fathers wife had gotten fed up with my presence, and my father had called the judge and demanded to know when I was to be tried. Is this is a naive man? The question would haunt me for years. At the trail, I was so embarrassed that I accounted for everyone in the room except for one little old lady who I was unfamiliar with. To my dread it was announced that she was the probation officer. Immediately after the trail she had me do some paper work and had a police officer perform a urine analysis on me. They were so sure that I would fail, but the lawyer has gotten me straight in order to be represented. I passed and she was going to be like my mother for two damn years. Would my degree be any good after that? I could only hope so. There are maybe two computer repair shops in town and no real computer programmer jobs for hundreds of miles. The probation agreement sounded entirely and facetiously impossible. I would have to report to her weekly and keep employment. Each morning before seven AM I was to call a special phone number and see if my secret colors was called. If called, it meant that I was to do a urine analysis that day at a ludicrous time for a cost of twenty-five dollars of mine each time. That would be impossible alone. I also had a curfew, and a several thousand-dollar fine. The fine was easy to pay off because I had had several months of money set aside for a work search when school ended. But employment seemed impossible because it would be missed several times a week for a few hours to see the probation officer and to do the urine analysis. No employer was going to put up with that, for they would surly demand an explanation. At first, I had to report to the probation officer each morning at eight AM sharp. Then I was to proceed to tour the town and get three signatures from hiring level bosses to prove that I had indeed asked for work. On this signature form was the probation officer title and that alone seemed impossible and extremely embarrassing. But I made the rounds. What kind of joke were my probation terms anyway.

On the way to Crested Butte one day, I stopped in to see a friend that was building a house. The water main was being connected. The backhoe doing the operation was from a company that I was familiar with, and I enquired as to the whereabouts of the owner of the connecting firm. As luck would have it, I was informed that I was standing next to him and that I could secure work by showing up at the West Wall Lodge build the next morning at seven.

No one listened to me. My probation paper clearly stated that I was to retain employment, and I was not about to contest this. Years earlier I had had a small spot of squemasil skin cancer and a doctor had declared my back to have the arthritis of a sixty five year old. I should not be doing manual labor outdoors, but the best handling of arthritis is heavy exercise, and the skin cancer had been removed. So I went to work.

My back hurt tremendously for between three and six weeks. I was the man on the shovel in the Lacy dirt boy's gang. I either used a shovel all day long; ten hours, or I ran the tamper machine that packs the dirt. It is a giant vibrator, and the only tougher job is running a jack hammer which is simply pick up the damn thing all day because all it does is sink in. This machine, the tamper, just shakes the hell out of you. After I got in shape, days in the sun would go by in a flash, and one feels great, except for the humiliation and embarrassment of being a manual laborer. There was also counseling to be done. I had to leave work for this also.

The lady that did this was an astonishingly beautiful blond of my age. Put in front of her, she would declare, well what do you want to do, referring to the rest of my life? Computer science seemed out of the question because my record at the time displayed a first class misdemeanor for drug violations and every computer programming company using my skills and hiring my type was going to use the computer and Internet to observe my record. I had a half compelling idea and half stupid idea to respond to this question in an odd way, so I did. Out of lust and embarrassment if not fascias-ness and dare at the gullibility of this isolated place Gunnison and maybe even instinct for survival I declared that I wanted to be a woman from here out. It would simply be put as when lust becomes envy. Since they had to verify my sanity through a psychiatrist for attending her counseling, I insisted that the psychiatrist document my sanity in writing for I knew that that was all that I needed to report to a doctor for an estrogen prescription. So I took the paper to a female doctor and got the prescription for estrogen. Actually this was about when the fall weather became to in-climatic for outdoor construction and I was relieved when Lacy construction had laid me off. We had finished our job for the season, but not after I had done untold amount of gruesome manual labor. Backhoes had almost run me over. My water jug had been buried repeatedly. I had worn shovels to paper-thin blades, which folded in half like paper. The wacker tampers had run down broken and I had kept two broken down most times while I ran a third. Handles made of steel had been snapped off, and the feet of the devices had lost one small bolt rendering the device out of balance, which more or less immediately shook the device to pieces. My forearms hurt as if they had been broken for over six months. Then came my first scary unemployment period. This time the probation officer demanded only weekly visits, but proof of heavy employment search was required to stay out of jail. Was I sure to go to jail? You see when the probation had started; I had been put in her car and was told I was about to sign up for the employment-training program. In the car on the way I objected. I had explained that I had a fresh college degree and did not want further training. She got us half way there and turned us around. She declared the program financially broke, and I was scared stiff for what would happen if the judge questioned things.

You see they also had what is called drug court. Every second Tuesday at eight AM all people in this program appeared before him collectively. Each in turn had to approach the bench in front of all the others and explain any discrepancy of probation violations. Almost every one had some sort of violation. I had none except the employment problem, and I apparently satisfied the probation officer because I would repeatedly explain to the judge that I was trying. Many many of the average twentyfive or so people had been thrown in jail due to infractions. Usually some had had a "hot ua" and did a weekend or so for it. I kept "clean" of drug use. In the following six months I did all of my 192 hours of community service on weekends. I was over a year ahead of schedule, and when I finished I was awarded the traditional box of doughnuts to share with all, and the judge was furious. He told the court how I had done my community service and scowled all. The second leading cause of probation infractions was people who were excessively delinquent at community service. Many ended up with jail time and original charge convictions for this.

My community service had started out with helping to de-weed the approach to the ski hill of the noxious but beautiful weed chamomile. I had explained to people that the reason that I was doing this was because I had smoked pot and the judge had me do it because he hated skiing and pretty wild flowers. When that job was done I, was assigned more typical duties at the community recycle center. This was also rough work. Me and the poor lady that ran the work were found running the outdoor job at around ten degrees below zero at seven AM some Saturdays. I wanted my work done. We recycled or reclaimed newspaper, cardboard boxes, as well as tin cans, and old glass. It was also gruesome work.

Next I met John Neilsin. For employment I helped him put the roof on his new garage, which had an apartment over it. I promised his wife I would do what I could to see him finish the job. Because many years earlier, I had had training in masonry and it was his trade I was useful to him. Actually, I had first helped him install a cultured stone front on a fireplace interior in Crested Butte just outside of town. This was a tiny step up from laborer for Lacy, but I was still real unhappy. I did a nice batch of stone face installations with one minor exception. One rock I laid in the wall was long skinny and vertical. I called it an expression of an exclamation mark and it seemed ok. John did the right hand side of the fire place and I the left. The two styles seemed to weave together well. Next like I explained, we proceed to his roof. The winter was cold and the days were mostly clear. We succeeded, but the temperatures tended to be in the negative region. Putting up the Vichathain plastic rubber coating was difficult due to the temperature. His method of installing four or five foot sections made sense. If the stuff were warmed in the sun, it stuck. Otherwise it was too cold and did not stick. We did several sections and at the top on the very last piece the wind came up. He was almost blown away like a baby doused in tar as it wrapped around him. The stuff is difficult and I learned how to use it. Still the work was unusually tough. He paid me well and we were friends, as he did not want to work these winter hours alone. His work ran out because his son would return from college soon to replace me. I was again forced to move on, and risk unemployment and a felony charge for probation violation if I did not find work. All of my urine analysis test passed.

Now I found work with Wildwoody construction building the group project condo by the mountain run in part by Solario. This job lasted one day because I was put to work with a renegade from El Salvador who knew little English. I also had the wrong experience for that day. I did not know to harness up on a rope for protection thirty feet in the air. The foreman's name was Chris and he was very cruel in his public relations. It is not legal to fire someone for their lack of experience and age. Again, I was seeking employment.

Periodically my father would leave on vacation for weeks at a time and I would house sit and keep his two ferrets and Siberian husky dog Coning.

I had two friends in Crested Butte. Richard Deforx was a drywall hanger who was ten years my senior. When I had met him years earlier he had been a self proclaimed crazy, as he had been in the Vietnam War as a helicopter pilot. His chopper had been shot down twice and this rendered him insane. When I meet him, he would declare that he would do artistic paintings because he said that "it was the only thing that he did not know how to do." I found it to be an interesting analysis that I would remember for years to come. Many years earlier I had introduced him to his wife to be. They had one male child also named Richard. Now this young man was of about twenty-one years and his father was training him the drywall trades. I periodically did site clean ups for him. Cleaning up after a drywall installation is messy and the work was maybe a day or two a week at most. Finally at the Columbine condominiums, on the mountain a contractor had been late to finish a job. This was in July and the 4th was just two days away, as I cleaned around an empty toilet drain I removed the rag plug and was accused of shoving dry wall dust down the drain. This is not a real valid excuse because dry wall clean up usually fills several “Dempstey dumsters.” A hand full or so at most of dust in a drain is not consequential, but I was effectively fired except for the fact that I was technically subcontracting because I had to retain and save tax dollar for income tax. Lacy construction charged forty-five dollars an hour and I fifteen. Not a fair comparison is what it was. Today I have learned that Colorado is a work at will state and people can be fired or leave their job at any time for any reason unless handicapped.

Then there was Eric and Sandy Shull. He was the one who’s job site I had visited when I met and got the Lacy construction job. For him I did a little painting and nail set hole covering jobs. He wanted to argue with me about the color of the wood dough for the nail punch covering and I threatened to quite. He kept me on that job for a few days and “ran out of work for me.” He was an old friend who may have been worried about an even older friendship with his wife. To summarize this section, the construction jobs were not panning out. I had effectively lost several jobs and this threatened me with jail time, but I continued to do any jobs that I could find that paid the rent. This meant construction jobs. Then there was the Pikester construction job. The Moores who own the golf course in skyland just south of Crested Butte were remodeling there home while away and Pikester was doing the job. He had dry rot going on and this contractor was losing money because as we attempted to replace a deck, no solid wood was found to attach it too. He fired me for lack of experience. This is not a legal reason to fire some one when his pay was abysmally low to start with. My understanding from New Mexico was that one could not be fired unless it was for gross negligence, but latter I learned that it is a right to work state and on can be fired for any reason. This makes this scenario rather in humane. Still I kept trying as a jail sentence was my alternative.

I had moved to Colorado with a new degree in Electronics at forty years of age. I had forty thousand dollars in retirement. When I turned forty-one, I had fifty thousand, and that was because the nineties were in full swing. Now, I still had most of it minus the five thousand for legal representation. I now had my two computer science degrees that were useless for the time being.

Next, I worked briefly for one more construction contractor called Clarkdumb and Murphyness. They were two kids in their twenties who were learning the ropes. They had declared me unfit for age reasons, and this was also a most unfair act. The doorways in the house that they were finishing up on the mountain were too large to fit the door openings that they had assembled. I seemed to be the scapegoat or excuse as their job ran over cost at this point. I remember throwing out thousands of dollar worth of wood at their instruction. Sad that Was.

By now it was mid summer and I met Allan Lower. He was building a house in my father's complex of Meridian lake Parks. As it turned out this fellow had attended school to become an attorney as a teenager and dropped out. Like my father he was from upstate New York. He had moved to Aspen Colorado and become a seasonal construction worker and ski instructor. Then he had sued someone for not showing up for a construction job in a timely manor. This left him rather rich and he fled for Australia for around twenty years. Upon his return he started this house build. This job I kept for almost the duration of the build. That would be until the winter made the site to cold and the remaining jobs were indoor jobs reserved for subcontractors of individual specialties. He became a real friend and savior for me. Finally, I worked this job for most of the entire build and I witnessed first hand most of an entire residential build. I had been hired on as an independent subcontractor and apprentice carpenter. As it turned out, my teacher would be fired and the roofing would be installed buy a larger outfitter. Somehow, I survived my trainer. As an ex-senior technician, I knew how things worked. Carpenters need support as materials arrive and cleanups are constant. All I did was clean up and distribute huge loads of wood as they were delivered. Again, it was back breaking work every day. Covering wood when there is several feet of snow is cold and tough. I saved money for the winter.

The winter was coming and again against my will, I still risked probation violations for lack of work. This was especially irritating because my probation paper had stated that the state should supply training and placement, but I was not going to contest and risk a felon conviction.

I had and increasingly turned to hand painting landscapes and abstracts paintings both digital and manual as emotional therapy by my own guidance. My skill level grew so slowly that improvements took years. I generated a web site using my advanced programming skills of Perl and SQL and I used my senior project of a work order request system to model an equivalent system for posting to the world wide web and I retained some amount of programming skill. It was difficult. I figured out how to use the cheap computer that my father had given me as a graduation present a year after graduation to make the machine itself access-able on the internet by addressing in the ip address and using Apache server.

Amazingly during that spring, Ken Peck of Black Dog Recruiting Software had found me and hired me as an applications trainer to do telephone based training for customers who bought his software. I spent a miserably cold March learning his system only to be fired because he quote “had budget problems”. This was a horrific nightmare for me because I still once again faced unemployment and resulting felony charges with no defense. Still I made the probation officer believe that I was trying my best. I wanted to smoke pot so damn bad that I counted down every single day of my probation. I continued to look for work for the rest of my probation. Why had they let me off of probation, I am unsure. My probation could have lasted many more years. Richards wife had separated him and moved to Alaska. During this time she committed suicide as she had been on her own probation for over a dozen years for drinking violations. She had used Popove Vodka and downers to get high most of her life and it finally had killed her. This scared the hell out of me. I had told a probation officer apprentice that I could get work from a contact labor office in California while the probation officer herself was on vacation in August. Upon her return one week after my probation finally ended she released me. Was this due in part to the report to the apprentice. I was finally free.

One hour after my formal letter of release I was in the near by desert landscape digging up an old stash and getting high. I sat there and painted one of my best painting in near ecstasy. When I applied for my apartment on probation, I had lied about my criminal record in order to obtain the lease. I had felt little choice other than to do so. The place was expensive and I used the extra room as a studio / computer lab. I never turned on the heat in my apartment both during my schooling at Western state college and probation. Public records are utility usage and one can still note that I had heating bills for roughly hot water only. This was for one hot shower a day. Quite an observation considering Gunnison is the coldest place in the nation several times a year. Look it up your self if you don't believe me. My poor father residing in his solar heated house must have felt real awkward through all of this.

Anyway, I continued to paint and build up my web site. That would be www.slicksway.com. Now I increased the effort, to little avail. I pushed a few phrases to the top of search engines. And I advertised a little. I validated most of my html and did many things to make my site better. I made interfaces to have purchases through the shopping cart deposit straight into my checking account.

Now, adjacent apartments have students living in them. These student fought to have me purchase pot form them. Them kids next door were out of hand. One ended up in jail for theft. The pot was extremely strong. In my opinion it was stronger that a narcotic. I smoked pot for one month and made another purchase that sat for one month for I was afraid of the stuff. Then I used it again. To date I used for one and one half more years until the economy fell off real bad. I could not use my retirement funding for it any more. Only around fifteen to twenty thousand dollars were left. What was I going to do? I had applied for jobs everywhere in the county to no avail. I had applied to web site s for programmer and the like jobs all over the country to no avail. I was too humiliated to apply any more. During the summer I backpacked into Democrat basin for one weekend and took many pictures. These and other landscape photographs of mine were added to the galleries I had on line. Still the web site rendered little return. My mother had secured an artist's show at the Unitarian church in Los Alamos, and I framed fifteen works of her choice for it. The show sold one painting for over one hundred dollars.

Mr. Louer's wife had purchased two painting for just under one hundred dollars each earlier that year, 2008, but my painting career was going no where. I wrote my biography during all this time and the book was edited to be something of my opinion but it is a story. It is not too entertaining in my mind despite the overall story. I'm not a salesman, and as I had always stated, if my work does not sell itself it does not sell at all. Based on this story, how could this person have ever existed at all? Well I did and do to date. Previously while high most of the time, I had worked for Military Subcontractor's, Honeywell, Alternative Energy Pajarito Scientific Corporation, Information Technology Information Handling Services, and Dorado / Syrton Security. This would reference my Autobiography. How is this possible? Well it is all true and that's why I write this. Maybe it had something to do with the estrogen treatment. All of the time I was on probation and after wards for over one and a half years I took estrogen and wore female clothes to the Center for Mental health for therapy. Finally my therapist had declared that I must do something or she was concerned for herself. Was she doing therapy or case management? I went to Grand Junction as a male and wanted my facial hair removed, shave-able whiskers was my problem and lay heavily on my consciousnesses. For original premonition proved true. They were clueless about it all including facial hair removal for males. This is the western slope of Colorado and as I expected they are naive due to under population. I had periodically wandered the streets of Gunnison as a female and could attract the attention of men everywhere when I wanted and dressed appropriate for it. When I did not dress to attract I got away with it also. I dress as male and got away with. Only Richard Derfornx had even accused me of being gay. No one knew much of any thing.

To make things far worse, for graduation I had had both ears pierced. One had been to low on the ear lob and it tore out. When I worked my community service, one had caught on the bailing machine wire compromising the low pierce. One night I had a dream. In this dream, I was riding in the back of an open jeep during a war and we paced the enemy. They had thrown a grenade and it slid along side the jeep observed only by my self. I decide not to alarm the front seat occupants as if they stopped the grenade might go off at the stopping point. If we continued the grenade might and we were still dead meat. I decided to remain quite and not alarm the others in the jeep. The grenade stopped sliding and blew up. We survived and I woke up. I had apparently pulled the earring off when the grenade went off. I now have a torn ear. It is a bit ugly and the cosmologist said it would cost four hundred dollars to repair.

One year ago I had gone to the local employment center. They had a posting for a job at a local motel. I remember the lady bragging about Gunnison low unemployment rate. The motel did not want my application because for one position they had received fifty applications. Talk about naive. Then I went to city market for an equivalent experience but worse. This led to few local job searches for one year. I repeatedly went to programmer interviews in Denver only to conclude that the cost of driving over there and interviewing was written off as information gathering by human resources personnel of the companies over there. Talk about me being naive? Also I recently visited Brad Lairs in Aspen and helped him with a build in Marble and equally interesting scenario that was. Finally, just before Thanksgiving, now, I secured a job with Crested Butte Mountain Resorts as a dishwasher up at the Paradise Café. I have worked two days to date and the job is both a dream come true and a nightmare. The pay is low and the hours insufficient to make my budget, but there is a free ski pass to go with it. What shall happen next? This fall once again my father went on vacation to float around on the Pacific Ocean. After staying at his place for two days I need to use the Internet. His office smelled bad and I ended up exhuming a dead ferret that had been there for nine months. I painted as I could, then I got up one morning and urinated a small but gross chunk of blood that looked like a small liver. I went to the doctor and they confirmed blood in my urine with a test as bleeding had subsided. They assigned me an antibiotic. Then they called and assigned a more powerful one. Then I went to Montrose to see the assigned urologist after waiting almost one month. The doctor stuck his camera in my bladder and found only a slightly red wall so he sent me in for a catscan and the lack of a report proves no cancer and hopeful a good prostate. I almost quit smoking and as I said I have at least temporarily stopped smoking pot. What shall happen next? I have for the second winter cut my estrogen intake to one half due to fear. This creates fear in itself. For my funds are around ten thousand in dollars and I can not really pursue that any more. I originally wanted full genital correction but that was too expensive. I wanted breast augmentation and that proved to expensive because I was slow to react. I wanted facial air removal but that was too expensive. The Bush administration II is about to succeed power to Obama and we shall see what that brings.

God help me. This concludes a fill in of information from my book up until my Paradise dishwasher experience. What gave the Judge the right to violate my guaranteed constitutional rights? Why did my father demand my prosecution? Why did the probation officer break the probation agreement and leave me with no livelihood. The were desperate and jealous? I think about all day every day, and that's all I can figure.

This material was first removed form my original Qumazon Trail book because it covers more rather none public material. For reasons of interest in my book I feel compeled to recompile it.

For now pending further report, I shall revise my life story of previous of drug use to include sex and rock and roll for the record. Entertained? It is all true to my memory. To fully complete the story reference my Autobiography, The Quemazon Trail, and Simplified Electronics for Computers by Scott. Hope that I edit sufficiently this and the electronics memoirs before I die.

Note Referencing the Peter Principle. I myself am an statistical "outlier" because I to date far "out rose my level and fell back to it". What a statistical anomaly I am. So is my country politically to date. Democracy is virtually self defeating to date. Good luck Obamaa.

As the saying goes it is " Sex, Drugs, Rock and Role" Rock and Role refers to the music of my generation. When I was a per-teen the transistor had been not really invented but introduced to mass market products. The girls next store were among this crowd of teenagers that were irritating to adults because they ere found to be running around with these new portable handheld radios seeming glued to there ears. They were listening to the new craze. That would refer to music such as the Beatles who had come from England to debut on the Ed Sullivan Show. He was the fellow who hosted the Sunday night evening show that everyone watched. It was like a talent show with circus events, singers, comedians and anything that entertained people from a live stage. These Beatles had young women screaming and no one could understand such behavior. Why would they scream if they had not been assaulted. It was because they were so excited to witness the overnight sensation of the first rock stars. Their electrically amplified guitars were new and the sounds coming out of these devices was unlike anything the world had ever heard.

For me it sorta started in the third grade. Star Trek was first seen that year and everyone wondered how had the producers come up with this Spoke fellow. He was a curiously human like character except for his ears and haircut. His intellect was astounding and it did not fit his hippie like image. You see his hair was cut at a long bangs length. It was cut at a length that was long enough to classify him as a radical because if one, a male, could pull ones hair down in front of ones eyes and it obstructed the vision then it was to long. These fellows need haircuts. Because of the fascination over this Star Trek cast member, I wanted my hair cut that way and I got it. That was about all I knew except everyone was fascinated by the show itself.

Things were not developing that fast yet. When I got to the sixth grade more development along the lines of sex, drug, rock and role appeared. Easy Rider the movie came out. This meant that the first “low rider” motorcycles appeared with their high handle bars, long skinny seats and a bar rising in the air for the driver to lean back on. The appearance of these machines was aesthetically appealing and we fashioned our bicycles after them. We called the seats banana seat because of their long skinny profile. Bike tire were discovered to work well for traversing dirt trails and they were extremely easy to ride wheelies on. This meant that one could pop the front tire up in the air and continue to ride for some distance.. Cool guys would ride all the way down the street in this fashion. Cool was just one of the terms that was used to express this new generations idea. It meant neat or fashionable and required explanation and it usually accompanied frown for what sense did it make. Cool had nothing to do with temperature. Boss was not the person that one reported to at work but it meant that a person was extremely cool or fashionable. More lingo was echoed around and some of it made its way into our younger mouths to the dismay of adults. We learned to avoid swear words but this jargon lingo made us hip.

David Molke had an older brother, and his hair was long enough that when he whipped his head back it flung his hair back into place, otherwise it got in his eyes. This was the next sign of the rage as guys hair grew yet longer than spokes was. He appeared most arrogant at this and he smoked something called pot. I was illegal, and so these folks were labeled bad all the way around. They reportedly used other drugs such as what was called acid. It quote “messed up” your brains and chromosomes and many other things undesirable but the fad was spreading across America like wild fire. People would quite there jobs stop paying rent or mortgages and just start bumming around the country in favor of a free roaming easy life style that rebelled against what was termed the establishment. These people were sure that they had found the new way of the future and happiness. They preached peace in protest of the Vietnam War. Anyway, David had an idea. It probably came from his older brother. He instead that a group of four of us take our old tricycles from early childhood and remove the seats so that we could ride them like the low rider or “chopper” bikes from the Easy Rider movie. For our elementary school talent show we rode these things around the stage in front of the whole school including our parents doing crazy little stunts. It was all done to the new musical song named Immigrant Song as preformed by the new rock and role group called Lead Zeppelin. The entire audience was in to much shock to be in shock for how could these kids be rebelling like that, in elementary school. Needless to say we did not win the talent show and no one would even discuss how we had placed in the competition. Anyway ours small group formed the basics of our group of peers for the following year which was our first year in junior high school. We were the first to be mature and cool. We were beginning to rebel like any kids just a little early. I remember being curious about this grass stuff and I tried to some old dry clippings of regular grass from the lawn, but I had trouble with matches, a way to burn it and of course the taste.

Once we were in junior high school everyone wanted to be on the football team. To my dismay my parents forbid it because they explained that I might get hurt so that I would not be able to ski. Broken knees were the cited reason. Instead I went out for the basketball team. I still remember the date for it was December four. The previous day all interested parties had tried out for first string and I felt that I had done well. Anyway the next day I managed to break my leg skiing. The following Monday I was informed that I had made the first string. What a disappointment it was. The doctor gave me Demerol for the pain. He did not change my cast often enough and I was real unpopular at school. They also left me on the Demerol too long. I can remember bumping my cast laden leg and crying out in light pain, I was addicted. When I was taken off the drug it was rather unpleasant for I had become addicted. I can also remember being given cough syrup for a case of pneumonia. Later that night I appeared at my mother's bed side declaring that I my father's death had been my fault and that the world was to end next for all peoples. It was to be my fault. That was an extremely disturbing nightmare. There were corollaries to life after death experience reports in that I can remember standing at the edge of a large black hole and being drawn into the hole. My father was deemed to be the one to go down the whole first and it was all my fault. I can remember looking back on the planet from outer space and believing that the end of humanity was to occur and it was all my fault. The real dilemma was that it was my fault and I had no idea which act that I had preformed had made it my fault. Needless to say from this point forward I never did either drug again. Later that year I re-broke the leg skiing at spring break. During this year our peer group of athletes was broken up. Each weekend night we would attend dances at the school and we would slip away to drink any beer we could get our hands on. All we wanted to do was be cool and impress the girls that we had as dates. Smoking cigarettes was also on our agenda. Those who did this were immediately ostracized from the athletic group due to pressure concerning association and sport performance, but one by one we all fell into the new group of misfits we called partiers. Marijuana was of course introduced and if one could go home smelling like tobacco without getting friends in trouble, why then "you" were cool enough to be trusted with the pot, or marijuana. The "jokes" or athletic groups drank beer but did not tolerate the pot. Our group included both.

Tom Matins oldest brother was getting married and his parents had a party for the occasion. We slipped anyway along with his next to oldest brother and we drove to a secluded old dirt rode where we presumably would go unnoticed by the police. Pot was passed around and I tried my first. I will never forget the feeling of elation accompanied by the fear of being caught. I kept looking out the windows of the car and seeing pitch black. My imagination would run wild as I would envision a stadiums worth of people all sitting just outside the vehicle in bleachers watching us break the law. That's how scared I was, but the feeling of elation was also almost too much for my young mind to handle. Back at the wedding party the cake that we made our way for was the easily the best thing that I had ever tasted. The confectioner sugar made me greedy, and now I was the one making others paranoid by my incredible cake eating ways. They believed that this behavior would give us away. Later that night and the next day my parents were incredibly clueless to what had happened. This seemed odd to me also. I had discovered the magic of the hippies and I was only in the seventh grade and me and my peer group were already getting deeply involved in tobacco, alcohol, and pot.

The world of the baby boomers was just in front of us and they cleared the way. We would head for the "uptown scene" each weekend night. The county had started a place called the community center where kids would congregate. With a few pool tables, ping pong tables, and a snake bar there was not really much to it but way too many kids. We had nick names for places that we could drive to in the near by mountains to consume our intoxicants and socialize around large bon fires. Occasionally the cops would show up and break it up, but with the help of code names for locations we were actually rarely found. The social scene was more than the community of parents knew what to do with. There were simply too many young people for the parents to know how to handle. Increasingly we would take over the houses of parents who were out of town and we would throw house parties that also drew the police. This behavior went on until we graduated and attained legal drinking age. Curiously enough I was probably an alcoholic by twenty one years of age. By that time I drank a six pack of beer each week night and I would include hard alcohol on week ends. At this point, the parties all went to the bars and I could not afford it. Somehow I began to taper off because by thirty years of age I ceased to drink at all.

I did not think that I did that many drugs. Other people did plenty more.

The list of drugs that I have had experience with and shall consequently discuss are as follows. Tobacco – 37 years, Alcohol – none since 2004, Marijuana – three weeks since quitting after 37 years. LSD about 10 times, Peyote – once or twice, Mushrooms – twice, No speed – never, No Downers – never, Cocaine – Eight years every weekend ¼ gram to an 1/8 ounce, Jimson Weed – once for real smoked the leaves and flowers light high

Onward Whoa about Acid

I did acid 10 times. I can remember each time distinctly. Lets hope that I get back to this and elaborate. We also ate Peyote once, and I did mushrooms about three times. Dutra Anoxia, or Jimson weed replaced pot for smoking when the market was dry. We occasionally ate the seeds and drank tea from the root boiled. Actually I skipped that one but I ate about fifty seeds one time. Hope that I elaborate there too. All the girls wanted to do some for having sex with. I always refused on that one because it would be a bad influence, They said these drug hurt your chromosomes? Also the principle who caught us at junior high with pot said that pot would make you grow tits?

Onward Whoa about girls or women

Sue Kielser and Cathy X who where girls that I cheated Heidi on. She was cheating on me. Sue was just a hottie who blatantly wanted it. It hurt to let her go but she was a bit young for me. Then there was Heidi's best friend Cathy, she had wanted it for years but I was faithful to Heidi up to a point. Finally I took the little Lady up to the ski area and let her have it. All was ok until I came home one day and Heidi proceed to get me in bed and I let her tie me up. Instead of tormenting me in walked her best friend Cathy. She proceeded to sit on Heidis face and they made me watch all they things that they did to do each other, many things in many ways. Finally they let me join in but they kept me tied up. We did a ménageatwa about three or four times until Heidi and I broke up. Throughout the coming years I saw many women some just plain old whores. There was also the young lady from TVI.. Linda Bender. She was plain the hottest of hotties for a while, but she went crazy wanting attention that I could not give while studying I never actually made it to bed with a man. At the sex shop I wandered in one night and let a black dude in to the private show. I started to go down on him and in about three seconds he was coming. I burst out the door spitting. I thought I had gotten herpes because of a sour on the poker. It healed and I showed the doc to late. He straightened me out mentally and I was pretty prudent after that. I did do two trannies back in those days. One lady fooled me. Pulled up at a stop light and wanted it. So I gave it to her. Turns out she got in the ass and was hiding her thing. That was enough for me. Then there was a nice one but she wanted to dominate but seem to have no clue as to how. We 69ed, and I did her and she was to soft to do me. She was on her way to star doom though I am sure.

I worked a number of types of jobs during those years. I had attended school to become a mason, but the real estate industry took a dive. I had tried a river guide service in the four corners region but the town was to small and quite. I missed Heidi, so I returned home. In those days hitch hiking was easily done and I traveled some. The group of skiers at my hometown ski area had become real large. My friends grew real jealous. Some of them had joined in on family ski trips years earlier and knew what places like Aspen were like. We partied ceaselessly at the ski area and we were a privy group. At least a half a dozen found there way to Aspen and still live there today. My brother and sister also worked at the same lodge that I had the following years. The Scandinavian Lodge it is. Then my father became discontent with the Labs. He left his job in Los Alamos and went to work in Switzerland for nine months a year. He sold his house and bought a lodge called the Purple Mountain Lodge in Crested Butte. Just a simple bed and Breakfast. During winter, he would return to run it himself. For the first few years us kids would run the place in the off-season. I would collect firewood. It was hard work. I remember vowing to my self that this laboring would now end. It was time to step up and go back to school as I had planned. During one of the summers I had tried the University of

New Mexico in Albuquerque. I had stayed with mom but it seemed ridiculous. To study so much outside of my field of interest was not what I wanted. I had started a chemistry program but was in utter dismay when a 15 percent on a test rendered an average of a C. What was missing.

Onward Whoa

During the months waiting for a school to accept me and transfer credit I met Jenifer. This is an interesting story that I tack in so I hope the transition make sense. Keff Ball was his name. I was accepted at Metro State and Keff Ball had promised many credits for electronics to transfer. He said he'd do it the next day. After three weeks to two months I chewed on him for dereliction. He still balked so I applied at Western because Dr Hymys promised much better for computer science. He even initialed to transfer credit for visual programming which he also later bailed on because he was an alky and quite in the middle. I did a year with him in systems analysis and design, another repeat. I also repeated Technical writing, Java, and maybe a few others. I am jumping the gun so I will go back to Jennifer. I met here like this.

I had called in for a Dominate Mistress. I shopped on the internet forever and how I got her is kind of weird. Her photo was cute as hell and her service was kind of off the main track. Just before she arrived I typed up what was the equivalent of a transfer of ownership of myself for the purpose of slavery and gender change, all to be under her complete control. She laughed and signed it in pencil. She provided her service and left. I called her repeatedly for days. Then finally as she had promised I would be her driver in my Purple Neon for $40 dollars a pop. She had whipped out some aluminum foil and was doing her free base at the first meeting. I thought nothing of this because it had been over a dozen years since I had left Albuquerque and kicked my old habit. Remind me to add that shit in if I dare? She was the most beautiful girl that I had and have ever seen. She had lines of clothes named after her. I later learned that I had listened to her on a radio show talk session during work at Dorado. Denver's Premier Pro Dom was her self proclaimed title. I drove her all over Denver for six months. She was the most ghastly thing when she reviled her HEROIN addiction. She as it turned out was probably a king pin. The Mexican boys of her choice would show up in no less than five minutes after her call, spit up wades of marble size balloons and do what she told them to. Half were coke and half Mexican tar. Seeing her jab her arm with out wincing a bit was the most torturous thing any person could possibly do to themselves. She would get outa bed at 5 or 6 pm, call me up, do a show for a rich guy and be parting by 8 with a couple of hundred bucks in her hands. Up till midnight and down till six pm the next day. I supported her dream for a while. I would also have to sit in the car and guard here while she did shows in here room. She was unable to hurt a fly, because she was so kind a person. She helped me try to change my gender for a while but it was in the way of business. The plants were in her back and she was all business all the time. She would do a dose of methadone to get her through the day light hours and then hit the drugs at night? Really. Don't get me wrong, she had her bad side. It was sorta a given that I had no money period or it was in her dealers hand with in minutes. I was straight to her, and that's why she kept me, except my constant pot smoking. That was for kids according to her. I wanted to fuck her for months but after about two I became scared that she had aids so I kept my distance. That's when she started after me. but I couldn't let her, not any more. This creature was different from any one that I had ever met. With her excess money yes excess BODY, she had her way with anyone. She would spend 90 seconds in a connivance store and five men would be following her out. I about got my ass kicked twice in six months. By now I had pumped up my arms and then I bailed for Western. Just in time because a sample or two of her white stuff and she could not believe that I was able to leave at all. In the end she was mad at me for it but it was clearly my life or my life. I moved to Gunnison completely under my own sweat. I thought about her daily for several years. I coulda told you more but you'd say I lied. Will I try to look her up? Is she still free. Is she dead? She had jumped the loony bin, so is she sain now. Am I crazy enough, I hope not.

Western State College The school had gotten much better. This time I attended and made my two-year degree into a four-year degree. Three days ago the official degree arrived in the mail

So much has happened and I would seem lucky. I was born the right year. The right things happened. Many of my friends had transferred to software to early and the dot com bust destroyed their careers in computer science. I have learned about so much having to do with how electronics hardware works because I was there learning about it as it evolved and grew.

What this is all about is what I have to finally share with you. Remember my Christmas experience, and my peer group problems? My friends were taking a natural course when they rebelled. We thought that we were special because we smoked pot. For years I thought that I was special because I did all these things, and I did much of it stoned. The only problem is that the week of my senior finals at Western State College a policeman reached out and did what no one else had been able to do. He preformed what was again a natural act and it made me once again conform to the normal path. He was pulling me out of the muck. He arrested me for marijuana law violations, growing in the closet. I explain it all this way because it is natural to try to make oneself unique, distinct, and special. To do so one might take a path of rebellion, which is somewhat natural. Remember that I did not want to be beaten up by bullies in Junior high school. I did want for this to happen. I was so lucky to make my life into what I did, but the natural course of events that align me to the normal has made me once again into a construction worker, a laborer to be exact. I am for no reason special. I rebelled like kids do and I was eventually reprimanded so as to conform to the norm as usually happens. That is what I share with you. What is to come?

LSD the first time was during an over night backpacking and camping trip with two friends. I took my dose of probably one half hit as we headed into the canyon. We dropped about 300 hundred feet into the canyon and rested in the shade of some trees from the hot desert sun. I remember the leaves I was gazing at taking the shape of a small insect that appeared to be made of plastic. The legs of the insect had revolving wheel like feet that were interconnected like the external drive links that connect the drives of a the wheels of a train. It was quite comical due the mechanical nature of the drive combined with the bright plastic colors of the constituent parts. Then I snapped back into reality and I was real excited. I told my friends about it and they were amused. The illusion had appeared in some fall colored leaves and did not return afterwards. Then I hallucinated some corolsary about the world as my friend throw down pieces of orange peels from an orange that he was peeling. The three pieces had some how represented the three of us and I belived that the notion was proment. They down played this idea and we had to reume our hike to the destination. My fellings of well being were great but it was not really a high, just more of a feeling of strong contentment. The rest of the camping trip was rather normal and that concluded my first acid trip.

The remainig acid trips that I took became less and less ideal.
Let see

Al Smith and I did some at the middle fork creek in the Jemez. I felt little that time exept resentment at the situation.

The same thing happened more ofr less with Jay Psel.

John slipped some on me at Ancho springs and that was a little better.

Then there was the time I hiked in and out of the springs one night while friends camped it was better excpt JM did not like my problem with P Owen.

Then there was I never enjoyed acid much because I felt guilty for doing it. One time my fther had announced that he would kill me if I ever tried it. About two weeks latter was when JM droped it on me un announced. Thanks guys.
